

Dear FCC Commissioners & Staff:

I am very pleased with the level of service that I have received from my DSL provider, IGLOU Internet services. I support small companies like this because they do not treat me like a number. Friendly service and support is nearly impossible to get from large companies that don't care if you do business with them. If you take the DSL market and give it just the big phone service providers, you may very well destroy a pleasant environment that involves healthy competition. If a provider is "bad" customers will move their service elsewhere...as long as there are choices out there. Please consider the consumers of a growing market and don't spoon feed all the huge conglomerates. After all this is a free country right?

Sincerely,

Bryan Jones
